achieved therefrom. Braggirt and excessive militarism, said the oreacher was to be deprecated, but a reasonable degree of it was rather to be commended than tabooed. No nation destitute of military prowess and skill had ever arrived at greatness or established. ever arrived at greatness or established for itself a character of strength and justice or a reputation for honor and self-respect. The spirit of militarism is sanctioned by the word of God. The Bible enjoined strict obedience, promptitude, disregard of danger, unfaltering courage and patient endurance, with the same fervor as meekness and un-selfishness.

Mr. Bailey said, in part, that in all ages the church of the living God had been foremost to respond to the call of patriotism in behalf of justice, liberty and righteousness. Hence it was that during the civil war the pulpit, north and south, echoed the call to arms and fired the national heart with zeal for native land. Pastors of churches left their flocks to go to the front. The churches sent forth their choicest sons by tens of thousands to help decide the momentous strife, and multitudes of them never returned. They fell in battle or died in prison or in the hospital ward, and the altars of the church, as well as the hearthstone of the cottage, used Green's August Flower than any were draped in mourning.

Today we celebrate the prowess of the brave hearts who held their own lives cheaper than the honor of their country, a people, in the words of the text, "who jeopardized their lives unto the death in the high places of the field."

"Comrades and descendants of these brave men are gathered here today," said Mr. Balley, "and it is ment that a great nation should pay annual tribute to the names of its honored dead." Comrade after comrade had been laid to rest, and a few more years would see the last of the veterans, but the cause which they fought for would ever remain green in the memories of the American people. The heartache of the strife has passed away, but the blood and the tears of those sorrowful days has not been shed in vain. Looking back over the past and contemplating the tremendous opportunities of the present, one is fain to believe that the civil war was a blessing in disguise, an evil mercifully overruled for our per-manent good.

Modern England had arisen purged strengthened and solidified out of civil war of the seventees h century. So in our case the union had been temporarily broken that there might be a reunion on better principles than the old. By terrible acts of righteousness God had wrought out a glorious de liverance, and the weapons of carnage had been turned into implements of national well being and advancement. The civil war has conquered the elements of strife and bitterness and left to grow

Lessons From Memorial Day.

"The observance of memorial day is commendable in that it starts afresh the better currents of our natures and tended to emphasize that fraternal feeling which is the chief source of our strength and glory as a people. makes us feel that life is too short for hate and invokes that generous charity which forgets and forgives. Time, with generous hand, has healed the gaping wound and wiped away the bit-ter tear. What more beautiful illustra-tion of this could be found than in the war with Spain, when the men of the north and the men of the south had marched shoulder to shoulder against their common foe and for the vindi-cation of their country's honor, which meant the same to both. This hearty co-operation and burying past differences has occasioned rejoicing at home and wonder abroad. It is devotion to sizes. and wonder abroad. "Loyalty to Christ must remain as the central force of our national life. Leave that out and the sun would fade from our sky, and the glorious day be swallowed up in midnight gloom. Human malice and hellish hate instigated by satanic genius have tried to blot out the vision of the cross from our horizon in all the years of the past, but ever in vain. FINANCE IN LONDON.

Week is Dull Despite the War News. London, May 27 .- In spite of the good war news and of cheaper money, the stock exchange is still lifeless, the public being conspicuous by their absence. No improvement is likely to take place until improvement is likely to take place until after the Whitsuntide holidays while there are many who profess not to look for a revival until the entry of Lord Roberts into Johannesburg puts an end to the anxiety felt regarding the mines, one way or the other. The possibility of a general election at an early date is also beginning to loom up as a factor in the market. Thus the cutlook is not encouraging.
